Slots FAQs Which online slots payout most consistently? Our game information pages contain all of the relevant Return To Player (RTP) information, which

Agitação jogo bacará Tbilisi: a nova lei georgiana sobre organizações estrangeiras preocupa EUA e UE

Há um mês, a capital da Geórgia, Tbilisi, está jogo bacará tumulto. Multidões de manifestantes tomaram as ruas da cidade à noite. Houve uma briga entre legisladores no Parlamento do país. E no fim de semana, houve confronto entre policiais e manifestantes jogo bacará uma grande manifestação no centro da cidade.

O desencadeador da agitação foi uma decisão do partido governante, o Sonho Georgiano, de empurrar um projeto de lei pelo Parlamento que a oposição pró-Oeste acredita poder ser usado para reprimir a dissidência e dificultar os esforços do país para se juntar à União Europeia.

O projeto de lei exigiria que organizações não governamentais e morganicas que recebam mais de 20% de seus fundos de fontes estrangeiras se registrem como "órgãos que representam os interesses de um poder estrangeiro" e forneçam relatórios financeiros anuais sobre suas atividades. Infrações incorreriam jogo bacará multas equivalentes a mais de R$9,000.

O governo recuou jogo bacará uma tentativa anterior de fazer aprovar a lei no ano passado após fazer face a protestos maciços, mas agora parece determinado a empurrar o projeto de lei pelo Parlamento.

Lei da Geórgia semelhante à lei russa

A legislação se assemelha a uma medida semelhante implementada jogo bacará 2012 na Rússia que tem sido usada como uma ferramenta pesada para submeter e estigmatizar grupos e organizações de mídia anti-Kremlin. Críticos dizem que um dos objetivos do projeto de lei, chamado de "lei russa", é alinhar a Geórgia, um antigo país soviético de 3,6 milhões de pessoas, mais de perto com Moscou.

Medidas semelhantes foram adotadas por mais dois outros países pós-soviéticos, o Cazaquistão e o Quirguistão.

Manifestantes georgianos protestam contra a "lei russa"

Os legisladores começarão a debater na terça-feira o segundo de três votos sobre o projeto de lei. Os protestos estão se intensificando antes do debate, e no domingo milhares de manifestantes marcharam ao longo da Avenida Rustaveli, a principal via de Tbilisi, gritando "Não à lei russa!". Em um ponto, um grupo de manifestantes entrou em contato com a polícia, que usou spray de pimenta para dispersá-los.

"Tudo mostra que este governo é controlado por Putin", disse Irakli Vachnadze, 59, um arquiteto, recentemente à noite em direção a um comício em frente ao impressionante edifício soviético do Parlamento Georgiano.

As opiniões de Vachnadze são comuns entre os manifestantes e outros críticos da lei na Geórgia. Mas os especialistas dizem que acha improvável que a Rússia tenha pressionado por essa lei e que ela é principalmente direcionada a fortalecer a mão do Sonho Georgiano, que tem defendido uma abordagem mais conciliatória em relação à Rússia em relação à guerra na Ucrânia.
